The Liberty Loan is not half taken. Buy a bond.

Hans Sulzer will succeed Paul Ritter as our Swiss minister.

The President may make May 30 the war registration day.

Germany claims to be making 1,200 U-boats a year.

Will Campbell has donated a butcher knife 16 inches in length to Company D.

Liberty loan bonds are $50. Sell a pig and buy one, or better still, sell a cow and buy two.

The Pembroke people are now prepared to let the public have the pick of their berry beds.

Attorney General Logan resigns a $4,000 office to accept a $3,600 place on the tax commission. Strange things sometimes happen in politics.

Wheat, which reached $3.25 last Saturday, has gradually declined during the week to $2.28 for July and $2.08 for September. With wheat approaching normal value, the question natural arises, when will flour drop?

Henderson county is still trying to decide whether or not to have a farm agent in a year when the whole country is turning its eyes to the farm as the greatest single factor in the war. If Henderson hurries, its agent may get to work in time for the turnip crop.

Authorities visited the socialist headquarters in Indianapolis and obtained several copies of pamphlets which the officials contend are treasonable. Milton Clawson, attorney for the socialists, appeared at the federal building and filed a demand for the return of the papers. The pamphlets condemn the war.

A plan to destroy the German crops by setting them on fire by means of fireballs dropped from Entente airplanes is suggested by Lord Calthorpe, a former member of the British army who has given much thought to the food situation brought about by this war. Lord Calthorpe married a daughter of Ogden Hofman Burrows, of Newport, R. I. The idea is not altogether original with Lord Calthorpe. The wheat fields of the Philistines were burned as a war measure, but the firebrands were attached to the tails of foxes.

Three administration bills on food control are now pending. One to promote food production; another providing regulatory measures, and the third giving authority to insure preferential shipments of food supplies. The main things sought are: Power to increase production, regulation of exchanges, power to fix prices and to requisition hoarded supplies, power to regulate grain in the manufacture of alcohols, prevention of speculation, licensing of distributing agencies and authority to create an emergency food agency to enforce food control measures.

The first duty of the federal government is suppression of its daily crop report, industrial and financial news, if press censorship is enforced. W. D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, said in an address at the University of Missouri as a part of the program of the University's "journalism week." "By suppressing the government reports," said Mr. Boyce, "you would close up the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade, although a few poker and crap games might live. Absence of government reports would at least prevent gambling in food products. We all know many government 'leaks' come through the Record." Emphasizing the co-operation which the press of the United States always has given the government in time of war without censorship. Mr. Boyce mentioned a number of big news stories which he said were kept out of print, for the sake of this country, "when the button was pressed at Washington."

GEN. YOUNG PLEASED

With The Progress of Work Being Made at Fairview.

MADE TRIP OF INSPECTION

Announced Another Handsome Donation to Obelisk Fund.

Gen. Bennett H. Young, President of the Jefferson Davis Home Association, passed through here Thursday on his way to Fairview, to look over the work being done on the Jefferson Davis Monument. Gen. Young is doing all in his power to push the work on the obelisk. The foundation has been dug and the building of the walls of the monument has been started. The foundation had to be dug ten or twelve feet deeper than had been planned, on account of the fissures in the top layer of rock. The rock under this top strata is solid and will make a secure base for the monument.

While here Gen. Young stated that another contribution had been made to the fund being raised to pay for park improvements. This was a donation from Col. E. H. Taylor, Jr. He also expressed his appreciation of the action taken by the Christian county fiscal court in putting Littlefield Highway in good condition. He was well pleased with the proposed repairs to the road from here to Fairview.

Knocked Down With Money.

A plucky citizen who attacked escaping bank robbers at Castle Shannon, Pa., and snapped an unloaded gun, was knocked down with a bag of money, the robbers having emptied their pistols, killing two men inside. They escaped in an auto but were pursued and one of them killed and the other captured.

COMMENCEMENT AT BETHEL

Annual Sermon Tomorrow Night and Baccalaureate Tuesday Night.

Last night at Bethel College the Senior recital of Miss Mary Claypool and Miss Ruth Major, graduates in Piano and Voice, delighted a large audience of appreciative listeners. Miss Claypool's playing was of the highest order and assured for her a place among the most accomplished pianists in this region. Miss Major has a delightful voice and her renditions were highly appreciated.

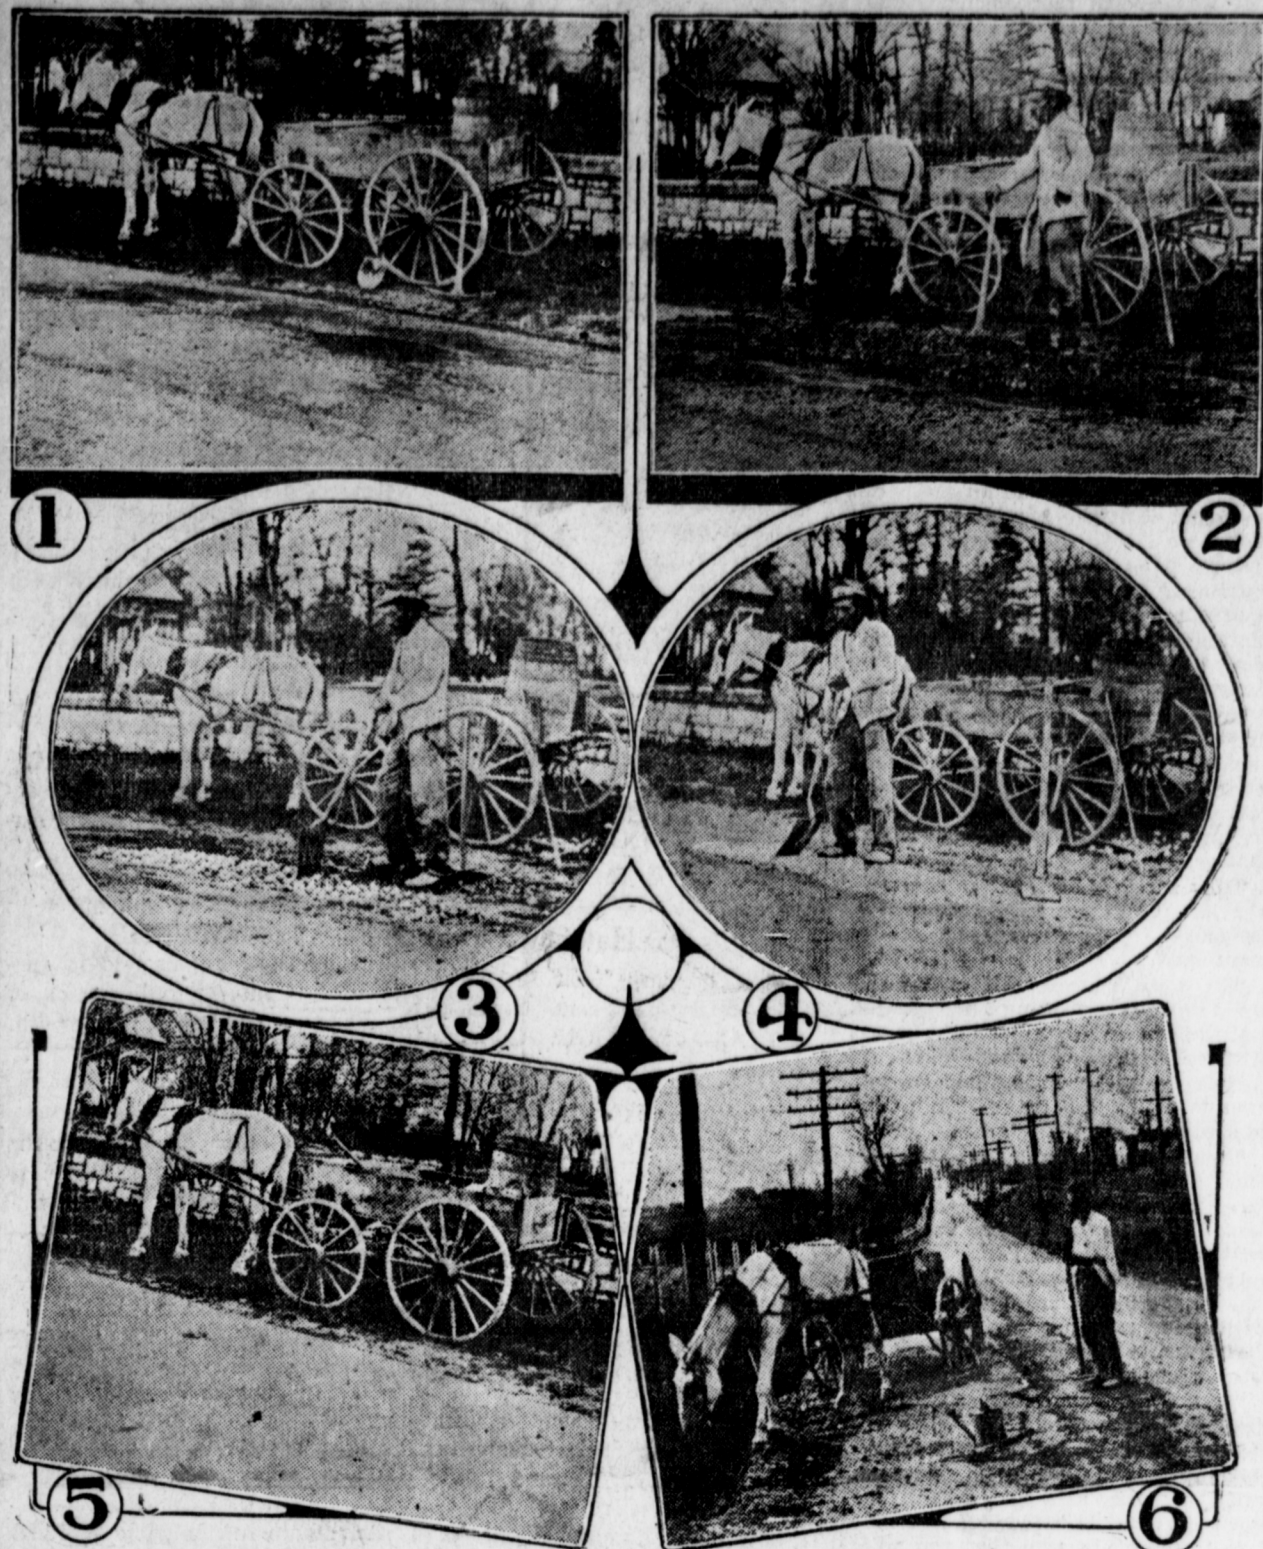

To-morrow night at the First Baptist church, the Rev. A. B. Gardner, of Dawson Springs, will preach the annual sermon and on Tuesday night at the same place Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Trenton, will deliver the Baccalaureate address to the students of the College. Everybody is invited to attend.

The Alumnae Association will hold a meeting at the college Tuesday morning and at noon will spread a picnic dinner on the lawn. Friends of the college are invited to come and bring a basket. Exercises by the girls in the afternoon.

DAMAGE SUITS.

Suits for $2,000 each, have been filed by W. T. Garrard and W. R. Attaway against the L. & N. railroad company. The plaintiffs claim they bought tickets here for Clarksville on March 12, but were not allowed to board the train and by reason of the delay caused by not being at Clarksville on time, were damaged in the sum of $2,000 apiece. Fowler & White represent the plaintiffs.

HIGH TAX ON THE RICH

Endorse One-Fourth Increase on Assessments Between $40,000 and $1,000,000.

VOTE IS 146 TO 107

Men Who Make More Than Million a Year Must Yield 45 Per Cent of It.

Washington, May 18.—Further drastic increases were written into the income tax schedules of the war revenue bill by the house in committee of the whole after announcement by Democratic Leader Kitchen that Secretary McAdoo's latest estimate of the gross cost for one year, which period the pending bill is intended to cover would be about $2,245,000,000.

The increase, 25 per cent. on all the proposed surtaxes on incomes between $40,000 and $1,000,000, as reported by the committee and a 45 per cent. surtax on incomes in excess of $1,000,000 as proposed by Representative Lenroot, of Wisconsin, were included by a vote of 146 to 106. Representative Kitchen and others who were opposed to increased income taxes voted formally against the proposals.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Home Coming Tomorrow To Be a Rally Day Following Revival.

Rev. F. F. Walters, pastor of the Christian Church, has sent out the following appeal to all members:

The Five Brothers' revival has closed. The fellowship has been sweet and the victory great. Eighty-five who made the Good Confession and seventeen with letters have chosen the Christian church. We thank God for these and thus many homes are made glad. This appeal is to every member of our church; to their friends and to those who have entered our fellowship through this meeting. We remain on the local field and must bring success out of results. With these new additions and our own spiritual lives revived, we should be a happy, united, working church indeed.

Sunday 9:30 Bible School, classes for all ages.
10:45 Communion and sermon. All disciples should commune weekly.
6:30 Christian Endeavor, meeting for all young people.
7:30 Song service and sermon.
Won't you be present with your entire family? We must count on you. Bring your friends; let this be a real home coming with prayer and love.

ARMY BILL GOES TO PRESIDENT

Will Take 30 to 60 Days to Fuse National Guard Into U. S. Army.

NEED NO MORE CAVALRY

Mounted Units Now Being Organized Will Enter Other Wings of The Service.

Washington, May 18.—The Senate yesterday adopted the conference report on the war army bill, accepted by the house, and sent the measure to the president for his signature.

The vote was 65 to 8. Those voting against adoption were Senators Gore, Gronna, Hardwick, Kirby, LaFollette, Norris, Stone and Trammell. Senator Fall was excused from voting. It will require between 30 and 60 days after President Wilson signs the army bill to bring the national guard into the federal army under the draft provisions of the national defense act. This can be stated authoritatively, although the war department is withholding announcement as to details of the process to be followed with the state troops until the bill has been signed.

TORCH LIGHTS RETREAT

Smoke Rising From Many Villages North and South of St. Quentin.

BRITISH PUSH ONWARD

Italian Troops Capture Duino, 12 Miles East From Austria's Chief Seaport.

Paris, May 18.—The desperate German counter-offensive has been going on since Tuesday in the region of Laffaux is considered in competent quarters as intended to mask a further retirement of the Germans on other parts of the front.

During the last few days the number of fires in village behind the German front, both north and south of St. Quentin, has greatly increased. The town of St. Quentin itself, which has been gradually burning for the last few weeks, is now overhung with heavy smoke clouds. These facts are considered indications of a retreat, being similar to those which preceded the last retirement in which the Germans left a vast area of devastation.

The British troops have completed the capture of the village Bullecourt, according to the announcement from the war office.

The announcement says: "Today our troops completed the capture of Bullecourt, taking some 60 prisoners."

"The whole of the village, for the possession of which constant fighting has taken place since May 3, now is in our hands."

A dispatch from Turin reports that the Italian troops have captured the town of Duino. The dispatch says an announcement of the taking of this important strategic point will soon be made officially.

The town of Duino, is on the Gulf of Triest about 12 miles northwest of Triest, Austria's principal seaport.

PATHETIC STORY DRAWS CASH

Officials Moved By "Tale of Woe," But "Sad Story" Proves Hoax.

A stranger giving his name as Grover Southern was convicted of disorderly conduct Thursday in police court and given 51 days. Southern went to the police office Wednesday and told a pathetic story of having married a girl about fifteen miles from the city and their being brought here by the bride's brother, in order that they might take a train to go to his home he said, and later his pocket book was lost, which left him stranded, and chief Chief Roper and Commissioner Bassett donated $2 each to help him along. Further investigation, however, proved the story to be a hoax, and the case was thus disposed of, as above stated.

AVIATORS IN TOWN.

Passed Through Enroute from Memphis to Chicago.

Instructor T. R. Sinclair, head mechanic Fry and three students from the Memphis Aviation School, which will be discontinued, passed through town in an automobile Thursday enroute to Chicago. Mr. Sinclair was much impressed with our level country and said he believed one of the government's 27 aviation fields could be located here with proper efforts, as one is needed in this section to take the place of the one at Memphis.

England has at last made a definite move for home rule in Ireland, or for the greater part of it, without delay.
The Prime Minister has set forth in a letter that the government is desirous of effecting an immediate settlement, which will concede the largest possible measure of home rule that can be secured by agreement at this moment without prejudice to the undertaking by parliament of a most disputed question after the war. The government's proposals provide for the introduction of a bill for the immediate application of the home rule act to Ireland, but excluding the six counties of northeast Ulster, such exclusion to be subject to reconsideration by parliament at the end of five years; a council of Ireland to be composed of two delegations, representing the excluded area as well as the new Irish parliament; consideration of the bill after its second reading by a special conference under the chairmanship of some one commanding general confidence. As an alternative it is suggested by the premier that a convention of Irishmen of all parties be assembled for the purpose of arranging a scheme of Irish self-government.

MARTHA'S MENU

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

Martha was sitting in the small restaurant on upper Broadway having luncheon when a plot registered itself in her conscious mind. It was not an extraordinarily good plot, yet, since she had so many stories to write, each one was worth remembering for future use.

It was seldom that Martha found herself without her notebook.
However, Martha soon supplied her lack by asking for a pencil from the waiter and by making use of the menu card.

The waiter brought in a savory crab meat concoction and set it before Martha and so delicious was its flavor that plots and the writing of plots were entirely forgotten. She ate quickly, paid the waiter hurriedly and went swiftly out of the restaurant and along Broadway.

The rather serious-looking young man who took the chair vacated by Martha was interested sufficiently in his menu card to glance at both front and back of it. On the front he saw names of dainty edibles from which he made a selection and on the back he found Martha's hurriedly written plot for a story.

"This is more than I prayed for," murmured the young man, and proceeded to read all that he could of Martha's almost illegible writing; "a story to read and a good lunch all for forty cents."

He had scarcely finished the story and decided that it wasn't bad, but it could be wonderfully improved, when a stormy-eyed girl came into the restaurant and stood beside him. Looking up, John Durant questioned with his eyes.

"May I please have the menu card you just put in your pocket?" Martha demanded. "I left it here but a moment ago."

"Sit down," suggested Durant and stood up as if welcoming a friend. "I want to talk to you about the story—
if it really belongs to you."

"Yes, thank you," she said in answer to his request that she join him in a cup of coffee.

"Now," Durant said, when he had Martha comfortably established behind the coffee and a small sherbet, "I want to tell you that while the story written on this menu is rather well conceived I can give you far better material for the ending." He proceeded to outline the story, but brought a wonderful climax into it that quite astonished Martha.

"Oh! That is heaps better," she exclaimed enthusiastically.

"Rather good," assented Durant, thinking of the eyes. "Now if you write that story as I have outlined it and send it to the Sunlight Magazine
I feel reasonably sure that you will get a nice check in return. It looks to me as if that story is just in their line."

"It is very good of you to suggest the Sunlight. I hadn't quite hoped to land a story there. Do you know who the editor is?"

"His name is —," Durant pondered
a moment, "Durant. John Durant.
Send it to him personally. You'll get better attention."

Martha had arisen and her hand was extended to him. "If I sell the story I should like to know my collaborator's name," she said.

"I prefer my name to remain a secret. You might be tempted to hurl me into the limelight of fame along with yourself. I will watch the Sunlight Magazine, however, and take great interest in seeing the story there." He dismissed Martha with a slight inclination of the head.

Martha was torn between pique and elation over the story. She went directly to her studio and worked the rest of the day. When the story was finished Martha reread and polished it, made an extra copy and sent it to the editor of Sunlight.

Ten days passed before Martha heard from her story. Then she received a note saying the editor wanted to speak with her about a few changes in the story, and she went to the office of the Sunlight Magazine.

John Durant arose from the editorial chair to greet her. Martha was so taken aback when she recognized the young man of the restaurant that a quick color sprang into her cheeks.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "So you are John Durant!" She felt intensely foolish after that remark.

"I knew I would meet you sooner or later," said Durant, with deliberate meaning behind his serious eyes. "That was my reason for withholding my name from you." He looked long and frankly into Martha's eyes. "And now for business," he said with a smile that she found delightful; "this story is worth two hundred dollars to me, if you are willing to make some slight changes. Are you?"

"Indeed, I am," she said brightly.

He went over the story with her, giving her careful detail as to the changes. When he had finished he said softly, "You know I have watched you for a couple of months in that restaurant, hoping for a meeting in some way, at some time. Now—I am not going to be contented to watch."

"Well," said Martha, "you have been so good to me already that I hardly see how I can do anything but—like you."

"I hope your writer's brain contains another word in place of like," laughed Durant. "Before long we will inaugurate a searching party—you and I!"

paper Syndicate.)

A NERVOUS WRECK

From Three Years' Suffering. Says
Cardui Made Her Well.

Texas City, Tex.—In an interesting statement, Mrs. C. H. Schill, of this town, says: "For three years I suffered untold agony with my head. I was unable to do any of my work."

I just wanted to sleep all the time, for that was the only ease I could get, when I was asleep. I became a nervous wreck just from the awful suffering with my head.

I was so nervous that the least noise would make me jump out of my bed. I had no energy, and was unable to do anything. My son, a young boy, had to do all my household duties.

I was not able to do anything until I took Cardui. I took three bottles in all,
and it surely cured me of those awful headaches. That has been three years ago, and I know the cure is permanent, for I have never had any headache since taking Cardui.

Nothing relieved me until I took Cardui.
It did wonders for me."

Try Cardui for your troubles—made

Looked on Cross With Horror.

The cross was the emblem of a slave's death and a murder's punishment and was naturally looked upon by the Jew with horror. After the celebrated vision of Constantine, that ruler ordered to be made a cross of gold and gems such as he had seen and the "tree of cursing and shame" sat upon scepters and was engraved and signed on the foreheads of kings."

Dieting.

Dieting is the pastime of those who are physically unfit for more active recreations. It may be enjoyed indoors or out, and though it is not so vigorous as football nor so exciting as hunting wild game, yet it has many thrills. Perhaps its most tense moments are at mealtime when one reaches a high pitch of excitement at sight of some thin soup and two hard crackers. One becomes in fact so excited that one is obliged to hold tight to the chair. It is particularly exciting to realize that one is likely to fly into a frenzy at any moment and eat everything in sight. The scales are almost indispensable to dieting, although, for that matter, they are almost indispensable to a fish. However, to be anything at all, a diet must have a pair of scales. It will amuse you to see that every time you are about to step on the scales you think perhaps you have lost a little weight.—

One of the famous people who have passed away since the war began is the famous Russian clown, Anatole Durov.

Durov held that, whatever your vocation, the only thing that brings you success is work. Accordingly, he became the most industrious, successful and beloved clown in Russia, and probably the richest clown in the world, too, for when he died, not long since, he left a fortune of a million dollars, and a collection of trained animals that brought visitors to his home from all over the world.

Born of an ancient and noble family, he was a pupil of the renowned cadet corps, but before his graduation he ran away and joined a circus, says the Youth's Companion.

But he had no ambition to be an ordinary clown. He kept in touch with politics, with everything that took place in Russia, and applied to it his wit. Soon he became an unlicensed censor of Russian society in motley. Evil he rebuked by jest and gibe. No man was in too high a place for his tongue; and furious officials once brought about his exile. Russia loved him too well for that, however, and soon he was back in the ring. To show that he meant to be more discreet, he appeared with a padlock attached to his mouth.

He was a very famous animal trainer. The pig was his favorite pupil, and it is said that his pigs could do almost everything that human beings can do except talk.

Home of the Ruby-Throated Humming Bird Scarcely Larger Than an English Walnut.

The most dainty structure built in this country by the bill and feet of birds is the nest made by the ruby-throated humming bird, writes T. Gilbert Pearson. When completed it is scarcely larger than an English walnut, and is saddled on a small horizontal limb of a tree, often many feet from the ground. It is composed almost entirely of soft plant fibers, fragments of spiders' webs sometimes being used to hold them in shape. The outer sides are thickly studded with bits of lichen, and practiced, indeed, is the eye of man or woman that can distinguish it from a knot on a limb.

Although the humming bird's nest is exceedingly frail, there is nothing on record to show that any great number of them come to grief during the summer rains. It is, however, not called upon for a long term of occupation. Within a month after the two white eggs are laid the young depart on their tiny pinions. Young birds that require a longer period for growth before leaving the nest are furnished usually with more enduring abiding places. In the case of the bald eagle, the young of which do not fly until they are many weeks old, a most substantial structure is provided.

Uncle Hits Nail on Head.
"Sayin', I told you so, don't get you nulin'," said Uncle Eben. "De man dat knew de storm was comin' needs an umbrella same as anybody else."

Apple Purely Gift of Nature.
From the days of Adam and Eve man has always hankered for apples and much of his time has been spent in the culture of this king of fruits. There are apples so well-flavored and juicy and tender that they sell for five and ten cents apiece, and each apple lover has his favorite. But how many apple lovers can tell where or how his favorite originated? All the best kinds of apples just "grewed," like Topsy. None of them was evolved by propagation.

RARE COIN NEGRO HEIRLOOM

Omaha Man Bought Washington Memorial Dollar From Texas Owner—Few Were Minted.

By the display of a silver dollar J. A. McShane, millionaire oil man of Omaha, became the central figure in a Los Angeles hotel recently, the Express of that city states. Of course, there was nothing remarkable about Mr. McShane's displaying a dollar, nor were those who crowded about him the type of men to whom the coin is rare. As a matter of fact, the reason for the interest was that the coin in question is a Washington memorial dollar, one of the very few minted just after the first president died in 1799.

The dollar is about the same size as that ordinarily exchanged for a pound or so of potatoes, and on each side is a profile of Washington. On one side is the date of his birth, February 22, 1732, and on the other that of his death, December 14, 1799. There are 36 stars on each side of the coin. Mr. McShane obtained the dollar from a negro in Texas. The negro said that he had carried it for 20 years and that it had been given him by his grandfather. He was loath to part with it and did so only after Mr. McShane had crossed his palm with considerably more than the face value of the Washington dollar.

Mr. McShane said that he intended to place the coin in the museum of Creighton university of Omaha, which was endowed with $5,000,000 by the McShane family.

Sculptor's Romantic Career.
If there be anything more remarkable than the mighty genius of Rodin, the world's greatest living sculptor, who recently married at the age of seventy, it can only be the romantic story of his life's career. As a boy he ran about the streets of Paris unkempt and uncared for, depending for a livelihood on the charity of passers-by, and performing sundry errands for artists of the Latin quarter. His first permanent occupation was that of mixing clays for a now famous sculptor. It was during these days that he developed a love for modeling. He was twenty-two when he exhibited his first statue, "The Man With the Broken Nose."

Germany Developing Water Power.
Germany is making more and more use of her water power for the production of electricity. This extended use of water power has powerfully contributed to the saving of human labor, with the result that Germany can now produce electrical energy almost as cheaply as the countries possessing an unlimited supply of water power. The business of extracting nitrogen from the atmosphere has been so successful, according to report, that in 1917 the "Government" will be able to dispose of 5,000,000 tons of nitrous manure, which is four times the amount needed in peace time.

Naming Cities for Dates.
What is, perhaps, the oddest of all ways to select a name for a city or street is to name it for a certain date, and yet this has been done in Brazil for hundreds of years. It was on January 1, 1531, that a Portuguese captain, Alphonso de Souza by name, entered the mouth of that marvelously beautiful bay, on the shores of which now stands the capital of the vast republic of Brazil. Thinking that he was sailing into a great river, he named the stream Rio de Janeiro, or January river, and all through the centuries the name has remained.

Wine for French Fighters.
In the year 1915 the French government distributed 618,000,000 bottles of wine among the armies, each man and officer receiving half a liter a day. Last year there was a considerable increase, the total amount requisitioned reaching 790,000,000 bottles.

SEARCH FOR THE NEEDLE

By A. W. PEACH.

As the little woman left the post office, Marshal gazed after her with interested and curious eyes. During the week he had spent in the small village he had happened to come for his mail at a regular time each day, and each time he had heard the woman ask if there was mail for her. It was her manner as she asked that aroused Marshal's interest.

Marshal stepped to the window. At the clerk ran through the mail. Marshal said in a casual way, "I have seen disappointed people, but that little lady who just left here acts as if she had been sentenced when you tell her she has no mail. Anything peculiar about her?"

The clerk nodded his head. "Yes, she has been coming to this window for twenty-five years. She expects a letter from a chap who left here, so they tell me, to make his fortune in the West. He vanished and no letter has come from him. She is a little off, I guess, but she's harmless."

Gathering up his mail, Marshal went to the country hotel. The white-headed proprietor was perfectly willing to talk the matter over. "Sure," said he, "I know the whole thing. She was as pretty a little thing as you ever see, and she was dead in love with Clarke Sherman and he with her—as far as we could tell. Then he got the idea that the place was too small for him—you know how the young fellows often feel—and away he went. I guess she heard from him for three years; he was doing fine—so he said. Then came silence. All sorts of yarns went around, you know; but she held her head right up, I tell you. Then she got a clipping from some cheap newspaper out West telling about an accident he had been in, and with the clipping was a letter from a friend of his, saying that he had died since the accident. It threw her off her head, I guess, for since then she's been going to the post office just the same."

It was like searching for a needle in a haystack, Marshal knew, to seek out a man by the name of Clarke Sherman, for there were many in the world; but Marshal made up his mind to look up the man if his business brought him near the town. The opportunity came a few months later. Marshal planned to make sure that if Clarke Sherman were living he would know what one man thought of him.

His first question after arriving in a Nevada town was asked of the hotel clerk, but the latter shook his head. "Never heard of anybody round here by that name—hold on, perhaps some of the old fellows know."

An "old fellow," called from the front of the hotel, smoked slowly. "Why—er—yes, there was such a chap—lived out Butte way, but I guess he's been dead an' gone for twenty years."

Marshal was in despair, and was about to give up the foolish search, when the man who had been speaking pointed to a thin individual across the street. "There goes a fellow named Seeker from out that way—p'rhaps he knows something about him."

Crossing over, Marshal hailed him and made known his desire. The man's eyes were keen and crafty, and Marshal did not like them, nor did he like the man's answer.

"No, sir, there's no one out there now by that name. Clarke Sherman was killed in an accident."

Afterward as he thought the matter over, the antagonism in the man's attitude made Marshal suspicious. "I believe, just for the deuce of it, I'll motor out that way."

Early in the afternoon of the next day he reached a run-down, ramshackle place which his guide told him was Seeker's home. Marshal rapped on the door. There was no sound. He stepped in—and stopped.

On a shabby couch lay a man, so emaciated he seemed in the last stages of existence. His eyes were closed.

"Does Clarke Sherman live here?" Marshal asked.

He bent to catch the faint whisper. "Why—yes—I am—Clarke Sherman—yes."

"Did you ever know a Martha Lane?"

"Martha Lane of Reedsboro?" the whisper asked. "Yes—she died—twenty or more years ago."

"No, she didn't," Marshal said bluntly. "She's living now and waiting for you. I've seen her. I know."

The shriek of the automobile horn drew his attention. He turned to face the raging Seeker.

"What are you doing here? Get out or you'll get thrown out!"

With an oath, Seeker jumped at him, and Marshal met him half way. Once more in his hotel room, in spite of a throbbing head, Marshal wrote a letter to a business friend in the New England village; and in it was this paragraph:

"The whole mystery is now clear. Sherman fell into the hands of this Seeker, who, after Sherman's injury, took charge of him and managed to get hold of his affairs. Learning that Sherman was planning to return East, I am fully convinced he fixed up some scheme by which he made Sherman certain that his sweetheart was dead, and, of course, it was easy for Seeker to try a similar scheme on Miss Lane. I gave him a pretty sound drubbing, and have started legal action against him here; and I'm going to see that it's pushed through!"

Old English Physicians.

The England of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was a rich field for physicians, and their influence was extended in many directions. Some were very serious-minded persons who did much to advance medical science—others were famed for their adroit ways of amassing wealth. If England has produced Doctor Arbutnot, it has also had such practitioners as gruff Hans Sloane, who growled at his aristocratic patients instead of flattering them.

A Little Hero

The little six-year-old son of Will R. Janners is the hero of District No. 1, Stewart county. Edward and his little cousin, Myrtle, the four-year old daughter of R. H. Chadwick, were playing in a mussel boat on Tennessee river, four miles below Danville, when Myrtle reaching out for a cup of water, fell into the river. She went down once, and as she came up Edward, the brave little hero, reached out and caught her by the hand and kept her from drowning until George Whitehead, who was working nearby, could get to them and help her out. Little Edward deserves a Carnegie medal for his bravery.

WOOD PULP FIFTY YEARS OLD

Paper Was Used Economically Half a Century Ago When It Was Made From Rags.

It was just 50 years ago that the first wood pulp paper in the United States was manufactured, and it would be difficult to estimate the benefit this has conferred upon the world, for it was a step in the dissemination of knowledge, particularly current news, just as was the invention of movable types and the printing press, says the Portland Oregonian.

It will be remembered by many still living with what care every rag was saved to be converted into paper and how the paper, after it had served its purpose at the printer's was carefully put aside for wrapping parcels. Those were days of automatically imposed thrift, which were followed by disregard of economics so widespread that already after only half a century we are confronted by a prospect of serious shortage of supply of the new raw material.

Just as the supply of rags in the sixties would not have sufficed for growing needs, so it appears that soon there will be enough wood pulp to go around. But we have grown so accustomed to finding substitutes when we had to have them that the world is not alarmed.

NEW SEARCHLIGHT POWERFUL.

A searchlight has been perfected which the inventor claims will cast a beam for 75 miles. It operates on the carbon principle, but by use of powerful current and a special arrangement of the carbon pencils tremendous candle power is secured. There is little doubt that the new searchlight will do all that is claimed for it, for the inventor is already internationally famous through his work in perfecting the gyroscope for use in compasses and in stabilizing airplanes. It has been suggested that the new light may be useful for installation on submarines, as it would be capable of lighting up the water for a considerable distance.

CANNING CLUB

Local Ladies Will Try to Learn to Can Garden Truck.

The committee on Food Conservation held a meeting Wednesday at which it was decided to form a canning club in this city. It is proposed to have a government expert teach the local matrons the art of canning everything raised in the gardens of Hopkinsville. There will be no expense attached to membership and all the ladies interested are asked to communicate with Mrs. G. T. Wyatt, Mrs. Will Wash, or Mrs. Dixon Kitchen.

Mrs. Nannie Edwards Stowe, wife of W. D. Stowe, formerly of this city, died at Redlands, California, Tuesday, of tuberculosis. Mr. Stowe is a brother of Mayor R. T. Stowe, of this city. The family went west about ten years ago. Besides her husband two daughters survive her.

MARRIAGES.

Dawson-Gilliam.

At 3:30 o'clock Thursday, Miss Nell Dawson and Mr. James L. Gilliam were married at the home of P. D. Dawson, the bride's father, at Herndon. The Rev. J. T. Hawkins pronounced the ceremony. The home was artistically decorated and a large number of friends of the happy couple were present. The couple came to this city and from here went to Lewisburg, Ky. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Gilliam will be at home at Herndon. The bride is one of the most popular and winsome young ladies of the Herndon vicinity and the groom is a successful young merchant of Herndon.

Warren-Guier.

Lee Warren, son of Mr. T. L. Warren, of this county, and Miss Daisy Guier, who was an attendant at the Western State Hospital for several years, were recently married at La Junta, Colo. Mr. Warren is an attendant at the state hospital at Pueblo, Colo., and his bride has been connected with a hospital at Topeka, Kan., for some time.

PURELY PERSONAL.

Mrs. Low Johnson has gone to Lubbock, Texas, to visit her sister, Mrs. Edward Vaughn.

Judge C. H. Bush closed his court at Eddyville Tuesday and will be at home until Monday, when court opens at Cadiz. Judge Bush instructed the Lyon county grand jury to indict persons guilty of treasonable utterances and two such indictments were returned.

Dr. W. A. Lackey, of Paducah, is here this week. Dr. Lackey is one of the several Paducah physicians who have volunteered their services in the war. He has asked for assignment in the Health Department of training camps.

Learn History by Historical Novels.

In the June Woman's Home Companion Annie Bryan McCall says: "One of the pleasantest ways I know of making varied travels into history is by reading historical novels. I remember that when I was twelve years old I read Harrison Winsworth's 'Windsor Castle,' and when I was fifteen I read Scott's 'Kenilworth.' When I was sixteen I read Hawthorne's 'Scarlet Letter.' I was not thinking of history at all when I read them. I read them solely for the story. Yet from those three books I learned more of times of Henry VIII, and Queen Elizabeth, and of early American days, I do believe, than in the many historical chapters covering those times that I have read since. Those books made these times live for me, and it was as though I myself were living in them."

Where Were His Ears?

Winchester, Ky., May 18.—While standing by a fire with his back toward the railroad track, A. Watts, private, Co. F, Second Kentucky Infantry, was killed by a train Monday. He was guarding a tunnel near here.

M. J. Groom is buying a right of way for the new road between Providence and Dawson.

TWO SUITS ARE FILED

Each Plaintiff Asks the Sum of $5,150 For Alleged Damages.

C. B. Pitzer and Robert Johns have each filed suit against Bernard Atkinson for $5,150 damages. Plaintiffs allege in their petitions that they were "falsely, wilfully, maliciously and without probable cause, arrested and indicted on the charge of housebreaking and that this was instigated by the defendant." They further state that they were confined in jail for ten days. For the humiliation and disgrace they say they suffered they ask $5,000 each, for attorneys' fees $125 and $25 for lost time. The arrest of the plaintiffs grew out of the robbery some months ago of the store of the defendant at Bluff Springs and the cases were dismissed when they came to trial.

The June Woman's Home Companion.

Well rounded in fiction and special articles, the June Woman's Home Companion is an entertaining and useful number. The fiction includes "The Ineligibles," by Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd; "The Shell," by Mary Stewart Cutting; "Mostly Starch," by Mabel Dill; "Straight Facts About Todd," by Margaret Busbee Shipp, and "The Beautiful Joke," by Annie Hamilton Donnell.

Will infantile paralysis recur this summer? is the question asked by Dr. Roger H. Dennett in his article entitled "After Infantile Paralysis." Other articles are: "Uncontrollable Youngsters, Three Points of View," by Miriam Finn Scott; "Ethel Newcome," by Laura Spencer Porter; "The Chocolate Bonbons Look," by Katharine Lawson; "An Automobile Camping Trip," by Zoe A. Tilghman, and "The Last-Minute Garden," by Grace Tabor.

In the department of Fashions is an amusing article by Grace Margaret Gould entitled "The Fun of It," which gives some useful information on what to avoid in spring costumes. Miss Gould also discusses the summer wardrobe and summer-time clothes.

The regular departments and sections have innumerable hints for housekeepers, cooks, automobilists, amateur gardeners and everybody else. There is liberal entertainment for children in the section for young readers.

A TALKATIVE GERMAN.

The Germans have about 325 submarines in operation and about 80 to 100 have been lost through British nets alone, according to the Amsterdam Telegraf, which prints an interview with a member of the crew of the submarine U-58.

When at sea the submarines assemble at a given point every morning and receive wireless instructions, presumably from Helegoland. There are about 39 U-boats of the newest type, each carrying a crew of 56, and this fleet is supplemented by a secondary squadron marked with C.

The first-class boats have a speed calculated at sufficient to overtake any cargo boat. Two-thirds of their crews are experienced and one-third novices. The boats carry a fortnight's stores and have a maximum period of submergence of from eight to ten hours. Each is equipped with two periscopes and sometimes descends to from thirty to fifty metres.

Two Soldiers Dead.

Louisville, May 15.—Louis B. Neagil, 21, a private in Company I, First Kentucky Regiment, died Monday at the city hospital from a bullet wound in the thigh, suffered in an accident Sunday, "somewhere in Kentucky." He will be buried here with military honors.

Private David T. Boston, Company D, who died of blood poisoning, was buried on his father's farm, officers of the regiment attending.

Fifth This Month.

El Paso, Texas, May 18.—Lieut. Melchior Eberts, U. S. army aviation corps, was killed by a fall with his airplane during a flight at Columbus, N. M., according to a telegram to divisional quarters here. Capt. Jas. L. Dunsworth, who was in the machine with Lieut. Eberts, was injured but will recover his physicians reported. The airplane fell from a height of 1,500 feet.

The Chicago Male Quartet

THIS quartet has been prominent for some years in the best musical circles in Chicago, where they are in constant demand. Each member is a soloist of exceptional ability, and their ensemble work is of unusual charm and balance. They are versatile and sing with equal ease the classical as well as the old songs we all love. Most people are especially fond of male quartet music, and this organization will please all classes. They will appear both afternoon and evening of the third day of our Chautauqua.

KITCHEN WASTE TO CATTLE

Bodies of Dead Animals Also Are Made Into Fodder Cakes in Germany.

Kitchen waste and table scraps in Germany are subject to collection in cities of more than 40,000 inhabitants, and special wagons are provided for this purpose, Alonzo E. Taylor writes in the Saturday Evening Post. The collected materials are dried and pressed into cakes and then delivered to communal authorities, who allot them as fodder for milk cows.

It has been estimated that the per capita waste thus saved amounts to more than one ounce a day, and that the milk derived therefrom was equal to 1,000,000 quarts a day. Animal waste matter has been utilized to the practical exclusion of all loss. Slaughterhouse refuse, bones, bodies of dead animals—including bodies of animals killed in the war zone—fish and mussels are dried, pressed and used as fodder, alone or with carbohydrates.

Such materials used to go to the soil as fertilizers; to feed them directly means saving time. The control of sale and use of feeding stuffs and fodders of all kinds is now under the charge of the feeding permission bureau, which determines how, where and to what extent live stock shall be fed.

RUN MOTOR CARS WITH GAS

Scotch Engineers Use It as Substitute for Gasoline for Short Runs or City Use.

The unprecedented war demand for gasoline is stimulating the search for substitutes.

The latest fuel to be used successfully to run a motor car is compressed illuminating gas. The tests were carried out by the city officials of Glasgow, Scotland. A machine was specially built with two big high-pressure tanks and a low-pressure tank where the gas could expand on its way to the engine. The cars are said to have run perfectly. The engineers say that mechanism can easily be devised with which the auto engine can be used for compressing the gas into the tanks.

They conclude that the fuel is cheap, and quite practicable for short runs or city use, although the supply will have to be renewed much oftener than is the case with gasoline.

PARASITE IN CANCER?

According to Dr. Erwin F. Smith, pathologist in charge of the laboratory of plant pathology of the department of agriculture, the whole medical problem of the origin and growth of tumors and cancers is about to be illuminated. In a lecture before the National Academy of Sciences, Doctor Smith explained his belief that crown gall is cancer and that there is a close relation between this plant disease and cancer in animals and human beings. He also seems to have established the fact that both crown gall and cancers are of parasitic origin.

Waste No Food

Food Waste of About 700 Million Dollars.

"For partial immediate relief, every individual and community should consider earnestly the matter of food conservation and the limitation of waste. As a Nation we seem to have a disdain of economizing. In many homes there is a strong feeling that it is 'only decent' to provide more than will be eaten and that it is demeaning to reckon closely. The experts of the Department of Agriculture report to me that the dietary studies made by them point to an annual food waste of about $700,000,000. Of course, the waste in families of very limited means is slight, but in the families of moderate and ample means the waste is considerable. Even if the estimate were reduced by half, the waste would still be enormous.

"The food waste in the household, the experts assert, results in large measure from bad preparation and bad cooking, from improper care and handling, and, in well-to-do families, from serving an undue number of courses and an over-abundant supply and failing to save and utilize the food not consumed. As an instance of improper handling, it is discovered that in the preparation of potatoes, 20 per cent of the edible portion in many cases is discarded."—SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, March 3, 1917.

Food is Wasted

(a) When we eat more food than our bodies need for growth and repair and to supply energy for our work. Overeating tends to poor health and fat instead of brawn, makes us sluggish and indolent instead of energetic and resourceful. Eat enough and no more. Eat for physical and mental efficiency.

(b) When food is burned or spoiled in cooking. Improperly prepared or poorly seasoned food will be left on the table and probably wasted. Buy food wisely and then prepare it carefully.

(c) When too much food is prepared for a meal. Unserved portions are apt to be thrown into the garbage pail or allowed to spoil. Many housekeepers do not know how to use left-over foods to make appetizing dishes.

(d) When too much food is served at a meal. Uneaten portions are left on the plate and later thrown into the garbage pail. Learn to know the needs of your family, and serve each no more than you think he will want.

(e) When anything edible is allowed to go to the garbage pail or allowed to spoil for lack of proper handling.

(f) When food is handled carelessly. Buy clean food, keep it clean until used, be neat in all details of cooking and serving. This lessens waste and is a valuable health measure as well.

Feed Your Own Family First

Don't feed high-priced human food to hogs or chickens. Don't send valuable food to the incinerator or the fertilizer heap. Don't pour into the sewer nourishing food in the shape of milk, skim milk, sweet or sour soup, gravy, or melted fat, or water in which cereals or vegetables have been cooked.

Keep good food out of your garbage pail and kitchen sink.

WAR! What Is It All About?

HAS the whole world gone stark mad over a very foolish and trivial question? Are swords rattling, cannon rumbling, mailed armor clashing just because Russia wanted to show her love for the little brother—Serbia? Tear aside the curtain of Europe's politics and see the grim and sinister game of chess that is being played. See upon what a slim, yet desperate, excuse the sacred lives of millions are being sacrificed. Read the history of the past one hundred years, as written by some of the greatest authorities the world has ever known, and learn the naked, shameful truth. Just to get you started as a Review of Reviews subscriber, we make you this extraordinary offer. We will give to you

FREE—"Europe at War"

A big book and over 300 pages, size 10 x 7 inches, handsomely and durably bound in cloth, containing the dramatic history of the great events leading up to the present time; over 50 important and timely special articles by experts on the different phases of the conflict; hundreds of graphic pictures, portraits, photographs, diagrams, specially drawn war maps, illuminating statistical records, copies of official documents and diplomatic messages exchanged between the powers—a clear, vivid, accurate, permanent, interesting and valuable record—a record which once seen you will not willingly be without. Europe's past and present are here dramatically pictured and presented. Hundreds of illustrations graphically tell their own stories. More fascinating than any romance, here is a history so vivid, so dramatic, so stirring, so fascinating, so realistic, so wonderfully presented, so thrillingly told that it leaves an ineffaceable impression.

Both Friend and Foe of Farmer.

Crows do the farmer about as much harm as good, according to the biological survey of the department of agriculture which has completed a monograph on the relation of crows to man. The essential conclusions are that crows are about equally beneficial and injurious, and that they are so wary and sagacious as not to need legal protection. Lack of this, while not endangering the species, will permit farmers to protect their crops or other property whenever necessary.

Sensible Rejoinder.

"Don't you think," asked the young man with the long nose, "that Miss Quickstep dresses as much like a man as possible in order to get herself talked about?" "On the supposition that she does," replied the other young man, with a frosty glitter in his eye, "I suggest that we defeat her purpose by not talking about her. Understand?"

What's More, It Has Two of Them.

Little Eva lived in Brooklyn. When her father told her he would take her on a trip up the river she was delighted, she had heard so much about the beautiful Hudson. As they were nearing New York on their return he asked her what she thought of it. She replied, "Why, papa, I think the river is just like any other river, but the sides are pretty."—Christian Herald.

OUTWITTING FATHER

By LOUISA LA ROCQUE.

Betty flew to the telephone as soon as she heard her father's car move away. "Oh, Jim, I must see you right away. I've something awful to tell you," she cried to someone who answered her call.

"All right. I was just going to ring you up and ask you to go for a ride. It's a peach of a day, and I can't settle down to a thing for thinking of you."

"All right, dear. I'd love to go. I'll be ready in five minutes. Mind, it's awful news I've got to tell you!"

"Can't be worse than mine," came back gloomily. "We'll console each other. That's something, anyway."

In five minutes Jim Stetson's roadster was at the door of the Kingslands and Betty got in.

"What's wrong, dear?" The car moved away toward the country, where blossoms and young life were turning the world into fairyland.

"Dad says he won't have you hanging round. He called you all sorts of dreadful things—a loafer, and a spend-thrift, and—and too good-looking for your own or any girl's happiness—that's what he said," she sobbed into a soft little handkerchief. "And he said that he had—plans for me. There was someone else he wanted me to marry."

"Well—I'll be hanged," exclaimed Jim, putting an arm around her heaving shoulders. "That's about the dose I've been getting from father, too! What's the matter with everybody?"

Betty wiped her eyes indignantly. "You don't mean that your own father is down on you, too?"

"Not me—no, it's you."

"What do you mean?"

"He said you were extravagant and foolish, and that he wasn't going to have me making a goose of myself over a pair of eyes and a pretty face!"

"Jim! Why, he doesn't know what I look like! He never saw me!"

"No more did your father ever see me. I'm as freshly hatched out of the college egg as you are."

"It's queer," sighed Betty, "and very hard to bear! They can't make me marry anybody else, so there. I'll die first. Can you think of anything?"

"I'm willing to do anything for you, dear. I've always meant to go to work. But father's so busy with his patients, he doesn't have time to think of me. I've been waiting to have a good talk with him."

"Why don't you go into a bank?" exclaimed Betty. And then suddenly, "I have the very thing! Father says he's looking for someone in the bank. I could get Uncle Harvey to recommend you, and you could take another name and make father see how wonderful you are."

"That wouldn't be a bad stunt. wonder if I can work it. I would like to show your dad that I'm not altogether a good-for-nothing. I wish father could get to know you better, too. I know what a splendid little person you are! He was singing the praises of his office assistant who just got married, and how she worked and did this and that and the other thing."

Betty caught his arm. "Jim! Do you think I'd do?"

"You couldn't stand that kind of work. It's very hard—and long hours."

"If he doesn't have to have a regular professional nurse, I believe I could do it. I'd soon learn, and I wouldn't mind the long hours, if you think you could get me the place."

"I'll try, Betty, dear, if you really want me to."

By pulling certain ropes and wires another week found Jim in Betty's father's bank, and Betty in Jim's father's office.

The days grew hot and air stifling. There was a general exodus among their friends to seashore and mountains, but they stuck to their posts and worked bravely on. Jim felt once or twice that it was rather an uphill task when things were heaped on him that no one else wanted to do.

Betty, too, had days when she was too tired to care what happened. The hottest, busiest ones seemed to be the very time Doctor Stetson thought of restocking drugs or of rearranging instrument cabinets.

Lately Doctor Stetson had praised her several times for quick judgment and accuracy as well as courage.

"You'll have to have a vacation soon, Miss Knox," for such was the name Betty had taken. "You are looking a bit tired. I'm thinking of closing up the office the last two weeks of July. Think you can last so long?"

"Oh, thank you, yes!" answered Betty gratefully.

Jim took his vacation then, also. He was going away with his father.

Out in a launch on a beautiful Canadian lake one day in the next fortnight the Kingslands passed another boat containing two men.

"Jim Stetson!" cried Betty.

"Doctor Stetson!" corrected her father, "and a young Mr. Stockdale, who is in the bank."

In the other boat Jim had exclaimed involuntarily, "There's Betty Kingsland!"

"Mr. and Mrs. Kingsland!" corrected his father, "and a Miss Knox whom I told you about in my office."

An hour later they all met on the piazza of the hotel. There was no use trying to carry the masquerade any further, especially as Uncle Harvey had appeared, and he knew everything.

And while they were congratulating each other on the success of some plan or other, Betty and Jim slipped away, down a solitary path by the lake.

SISTER ANN BUTTS IN

By LOUISE OLIVER.

"It was all because Bert asked me how much a pound of sirloin steak costs," Tad confided to Sister Ann. "And I said that I didn't know just how much a pound it was, though I did know that the steak we had for dinner cost just one dollar and three cents. He didn't in the least mind our having expensive steak. In fact, I have it because he likes it. But he wanted me to know just how much a pound it was. And then he asked me how much lamb was, and I said I didn't know, though I know just how much the joint we had on Sunday cost. And then—" but here Tad's tears got the better of her and she leaned on Sister Ann's broad young shoulders and shook with sobs. "And then—and then he said that—he said that if most men ran their businesses as carelessly as women run their homes they would all be ruined. Oh, how could he, Ann?"

Ann had gone to her brother's little bungalow after a frantic appeal from her sister-in-law, Tad. "I'm in such trouble," she said, "and I know you can help me out."

"But I don't like to butt in," protested Ann, who, in spite of the fact that she was four years younger than Tad, was looked upon—perhaps because she was tall and broad-shouldered and level headed—as the natural arbiter of all Tad's marital difficulties. "I don't like to butt in, and dear knows I don't know anything about managing husbands."

"But what am I going to do?" wailed Tad. "Bert has been your brother longer than he has been my husband. You must know how to manage him."

Sister Ann paused for a moment. "Nerves," she said at length with the decision of a specialist arriving at a difficult diagnosis. "Both got nerves. What you need is a change. Get your mother to ask you to visit her for a while. Change would do you both good."

"But suppose when I come back Bert is just as stubborn as ever. Suppose he still thinks that about the way women run their houses?"

"Leave that to me," easily promised Ann. "I'm not afraid of Bert—because we aren't in love with each other, I suppose. Tell him tonight you are going, and if he says anything more about housekeeping just smile and pretend to be preoccupied with your going away plans."

So Tad went away. Sister Ann found her brother Bert at the office the day after Tad's departure. "What are you looking so mope about?" she greeted him, in spite of his cheerful smile.

"Mope, mope," wondered Bert. "Oh, maybe it's 'cause Tad's gone, though, as a matter of fact, I wasn't sorry to see her go—needs a change, I guess."

"Oh, has Tad gone to the shore? Where you going to live?"

"Martha, the cook, is staying," explained Bert. "I guess we can manage."

"Goodness, can you afford that sort of thing?" asked Ann. "Cooks are always wasteful when you leave them to their own devices."

"Oh, are they?" queried Bert, mildly interested. "Well, we'll see."

"But what I came in for is this: I want a job—want to earn some money all my own. Can't you squeeze me in here somewhere? I'll do anything for fifteen dollars a week, and I'll bet inside of a week I could be worth three times that amount to you right here."

Bert smiled, but he was used to taking his sister at her word.

"How'd you know how to run a broker's office?"

"I'd just apply a little good housekeeping. I'd keep my eyes open for one thing. I was just looking in the waste baskets as I was waiting in the outer office to see you. Why, there was enough paper thrown away there by carelessness to last a stenographer a week. It's just that men don't notice those things, I suppose. And the way the stenographers waste pencils!"

I was watching them sharpen some. They didn't look what they were doing, and of course they didn't care. But paper is up and so are pencils, and still the waste goes on. Do you know, Bert, I sometimes think if most women ran their houses as extravagantly as most men run their businesses they'd land their husbands in the poorhouse."

Of course, Bert, whose ambition to gain money by saving it as well as by making it was well developed, accepted his clever young sister's proposition, and within a few weeks he agreed with her that she had saved three times her salary.

"Long head you've got, Ann," said Bert, and Ann simply smiled and said: "Just a little good housekeeping. Any woman would think of those things if she was given free rein. By the way, when is Tad coming back?"

"Heaven knows," Bert was decidedly dejected. "I've asked her to come home this week. Let alone being lonesome as Robinson Crusoe, I'm spending a fortune keeping house without her. Wonder if you'll take a regular job here as economy expert at, say, thirty-five dollars a week to begin with?"

"Perhaps," called back Sister Ann, who was on her way to her desk to write the telegram that would bring Tad back on the next train.

Daily Thought.

For, of a truth, Love and Strife were aforesaid and shall be; nor ever, methinks, will boundless time be emptied of that pair. And they prevail in turn as the circle comes round, and pass away before one another, and increase in their appointed time.—Empedocles.

Coney Mentioned in the Bible.

There are several allusions in the Bible to the coney. The thirtieth chapter, twenty-sixth verse of Proverbs says "The coneys are but a feeble folk, yet they make their house in the rocks." Coneys are yet found on the Lebanon and in the Jordan and Dead Sea valleys. The coney is about the size of the domestic cat, has long hair, a short tail, round ears and chews the cud.

Kitten Puts Out Fire.

John is only a black and white kitten of nondescript breed, but if there is such a thing as a medal for bravery, he certainly has claim upon it. One morning I was sitting before the fireplace, watching John as he lay on a hassock on the opposite side, apparently asleep, but he was far from it. We were burning some old trash in the fireplace, and suddenly, with a report like that of a pistol shot, a cinder about as large as a dime came flying through the air and alighted in a basket used by John as a sleeping place. This basket was lined with a woolen cloth and the cinder began to smolder and an incipient fire was at once under way. John, giving the call of the cat tribe, pounced on the blazing cloth, trampled it out with his fore feet, and then, when he was satisfied it was extinguished, quietly curled up and went to sleep, just as though he had not done a thing that was a wonderful exhibition of feline sense.—Our Dumb Animals.

MUST REGISTER IF IN AGE LIMITS

No Exception For Service, Regardless of Race, Trade or Disability.

In a statement issued by the war department at Washington a full explanation of the requirements for registration under universal service is made. The statement emphasizes that no citizen of the United States who is within the prescribed military age is exempt from registration, regardless of race, occupation or exemption claims, except soldiers and sailors already in the service.

Provisions is made, the statement says, for the registration of absentees by mail.

Quoting the statement: "The war department wishes to impress on the people that there is only one day for registration. All males between the designated ages must register on the day set."

"The fact that five days were allowed for the placing of the necessary blank forms in the hands of registrars appears to have misled some headline writers. One day only—the day fixed in the president's proclamation—will be devoted to registration."

NO ONE LIABLE IS EXCUSED. "It is useless to ask registrars to excuse any one from registration. The registrar has no such powers. No one can suspend the law requiring all to register."

"It is important that all shall understand the significance of registration, and it is hoped that the day will be approached in the spirit with which the government has appointed it. Democracy is its essence. No one can absent himself, nor can the well-to-do man hire another to represent him on that occasion. The country's manhood will present itself on this day, and by so doing will say, in effect, 'Here am I, Take me.'"

FOR THE ABSENTEES. "Many questions are asked daily at the war department, concerning the registration of traveling men and other absentees. On the sixth day after the date of the president's proclamation, any one subject to registration, who expects to be absent from his home on registration day should go to the clerk of the county where he may be staying. If he is in a city of over 35,000 population the city clerk is the official to whom to apply."

"The absentee will be told how to register and a registration card will be filled out. This card must be mailed by the absentee so as to reach the registrar of his home precinct by registration day. The clerk to whom the absentee applies is not empowered to issue the absentee a registration certificate. This is issued by the registrar in his home precinct."

Eligibles detained in jails and penitentiaries at the time of registration will be registered under direction of the sheriff or warden in charge of such institutions.

The June American Magazine

In the June American Magazine Booth Tarkington has a stirring and timely article on "Middle Western Apathy." It explains the former attitude of the Middle West in regard to the war and predicts its future course, "now that the flags are up."

"The Story of a Wife-Made Man," by an anonymous writer, is a frank discussion of the effect of marriage on business success. "A Top-Notcher" at 39," by Alfred Grunberg, tells the story of Matthew C. Brush, once a newsboy, now the head of a great street railroad system. Among the other articles are: "What Men Would You Bet On as Being Honest?" by Fred C. Kelly; "Acting—a Part-time Job," by Walter Prichard Eaton; "Massachusetts," by William Roscoe Thayer; "Is Your Job Keeping Up With Your Age?" by B. C. Bean; "Up From Obscurity, by an ex-U. S. Senator, and "The Old Stone Mason," by David Grayson.

The fiction includes "Fanny Herself," by Edna Ferber; "The Cup That Cheers," by H. C. Witwer; "Monsieur Rienzi Takes a Hand," by Sophie Kerr; "The Things We Hope For," by Linda Buntyn Willie; "Jersey Lil," by Jack Lait and "Vagabond or Gentleman?" by Edison Marshall. Valuable material is to be found in the regular departments and the magazine is good throughout.

U-BOATS FAILING; MANY BOMBED

Report Shows Fewer Victims, More Escapes for More Submarines Destroyed.

London May 16.—The reports of the week's losses through submarines, is the most favorable in several weeks. The number of ships torpedoed is well below the average, while the number of ships escaping attack is very large. Those in touch with the anti-submarine campaign also are very cheerful over the results of actual attacks on submarines which have been pushed with the utmost vigor during the fine weather of the last fortnight. This has been particularly favorable to airplane activity. According to one report, more submarines have been sunk in the last week than in the month previous.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call to her eternal home our beloved sister, Camilla T. Wall, therefore be it Resolved 1st—That we as members of Carrie Hart Chapter No. 83, O. E. S., bow in humble submission to the will of God who doeth all things wisely.

2nd—While we deeply deplore the loss of so noble a woman, we thank God for her beautiful christian life and inspiring example.

3rd—That our Chapter has lost a faithful and useful member whose influence will live forever.

4th—That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father, Who alone can give consolation to their saddened hearts.

5th—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, the papers and spread on the minutes of the Chapter.

Respectfully submitted,
ELLEN G. YOUNG,
LILLIAN JOHNSTON,
E. C. FRYE.

ANSWERED LAST CALL

Mrs. Samuel White, Laid To Rest, Ripe in Years.

Mrs. Rebecca Ann White, the venerable widow of Capt. S. R. White, died at the family home near Julien, Thursday, aged 87 years. She was a daughter of Stephen T. Rives and was a native of Montgomery county, Tenn., where she was born June 30, 1830. Her mother was Miss Sophie Cannon Rives, an aunt of Hon. Joseph G. Cannon. She was married to Capt. White in 1854 and her husband died in 1904. After living some years in this city, she returned to her farm. Her daughter, Miss Lizzie White, and two unmarried sons, William and Jas. White, survive her. Another daughter, who became the wife of Mr. J. E. Gossett, died some years ago.

Funeral services were held at the home yesterday morning at 10:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. T. Hawkins. Interment at Riverside Cemetery.

FAIRVIEW NOTES.

The Fairview High School had five graduates this year, Misses Julia Tandy, Mary Ruth Fritz, Margaret Layne, Katie Mai Layne and Morton Petrie. The school closed Friday night, May 11. Both exercises Friday were very excellent. In the morning at 10 o'clock the papers read by the Seniors were full of wit and interest and were much enjoyed by the audience. It is hard to make any special mention of any particular participant in the program, as all rendered their parts very well, indeed. If any special mention is made it belongs to Miss Susie Fritz, who made a farewell speech for the incoming to the Seniors of 1917. Friday night, however, the commencement exercises reached a climax when Mrs. Verna Petrie played the Senior march. Rev. C. E. Hutchinson gave the invocation and benediction. Rev. Robt. H. Tandy, of Russellville, delivered the commencement address. The valedictorian, Miss Julia Tandy, and salutatorian, Miss Ruth Fritz, both read papers that were above the average high school productions. The quartette that came with Rev. Tandy from Bethel Male College, gave several brilliant vocal numbers. They were fine big men, with fine voices. Come again, Russellvillians. By special request, Mrs. Johnson, our able principal, favored the large and appreciative audience with a very pleasing reading. She is certainly an expressionist of the first order. The diplomas were presented by Mrs. Johnston with beautiful and impressive remarks. She also awarded a medal to Miss Mabel Hurt, who has the distinction of having been the only pupil who was perfect in attendance throughout the school term. The house was crowded and the best of order was maintained throughout the evening. This has been a very successful year for the school; the management and teaching has been of the best. We are glad to announce that the services of Mrs. Johnson and the faculty, with the exception of one, have been secured for the next term. A great many visitors from neighboring towns were here to attend the closing exercises. Among them were Mrs. William Dority, Mrs. M. D. Sybert, Mr. Charles W. Johnson, Hopkinsville; Rev. Gregory, Russellville; Mrs. Ware, Okla.; Miss Hazel Pollard, Mr. Bruce Weathers, Mr. Lucian Lindsey, Mrs. Alice Anderson, Elkton; Miss Marie Daniel, Rev. Daniel, Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair Millen, Trenton; Miss Louise Haynes, Howell; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Yancey, Pembroke.

BOOKKEEPERS DIE YOUNG; FARMERS LIVE LONGEST.

Washington, May 18.—Bookkeepers and office assistants die youngest and farmers die oldest, according to a Bureau of Labor statistics report issued today, based on analysis of deaths recorded by a life insurance company between 1911 and 1912. The average age of death among bookkeepers and clerks was 36 years and among farmers 58 years.

Tuberculosis caused 35 deaths of clerks, the highest record for that disease, and heart disease was responsible for the largest number of farmers' deaths, 16 per cent.
